

Turning today's tradies into tomorrow's future

Do you want to excel in your trade, whether it is plumbing, electrical, refrigeration or data communication?

One of Australia's leading learning organisations, PEER, has got all the tools and knowledge to help you succeed.

The not-for-profit association was established in 1985, offering nationally recognised trade training and upskilling courses, plus hosts employment for apprentices.

With its head office in Albert Park, PEER's mission is to address Australia's skill development through the attraction, training and employment of quality people in partnership with industry.

It embraces its values to create positive futures, lifelong learning and enable everyone to be the best they can be. Here is what you can expect at PEER:

Academy model

PEER understands that students come from diverse backgrounds and that their life stories are made up of both achievements and challenges.

Students at PEER benefit enormously from the training because staff are invested in them as people, not just students doing a particular course.

Everyone is treated equally and with respect, care and compassion in an environment that encourages people to be their best.

Trainers and coaches work with students to train, coach, mentor and support them.

They equip apprentices with a nationally accredited qualification and also impart problem-solving, critical thinking, communication and life skills. Apprentices graduate with a well-rounded, valuable education that sets them up for success in their chosen careers.

Centre of excellence

PEER's training centre is the most modern, comprehensive, well-equipped facility in South Australia and ranks among the best in the country.

It has simulated work environments, spacious classrooms conveniently situated right next to practical work spaces and uses the latest technology such as augmented reality and virtual reality to create world-class learning experiences. PEER has embraced technology for some of its training because of its ability to make learning off-the-job as real, beneficial and effective as possible.

PEER is one of Australia's leading learning organisations.

PICTURE: SUPPLIED

Within the centre, students have access to their own dedicated equipment and work spaces, so there's no downtime waiting for others to have their turn, thereby maximising hands-on learning.

Lifelong learning model

PEER has a lifelong learning model which means it can deliver training to people in the building and construction industry at any stage of their career. Once an apprenticeship is complete, there are a number of short courses that may be required to comply with Work Health Safety regulations, or to obtain specialised skills and knowledge ahead of working on a particular job.

There are also some qualifications that, by law, need to be updated every so often and PEER caters for all these circumstances.

Working with industry, PEER is responsive to the needs of businesses and is able to deliver tailored trade and work health safety courses for companies.

PEER is also formalising a strategic alliance with Training Prospects, with the intention of being the registered training provider at its Elizabeth Campus.

To transfer your apprentice to PEER, contact 8348 1200. Alternatively, visit peer.com.au

PEER extends their footprint into the North.

With 30 years' experience producing award-winning apprentices, PEER is formalising a strategic alliance with Training Prospects to continue delivering nationally accredited trade training courses at Elizabeth.

Apprenticeship training will include:

- Plumbing
- Roof Plumbing
- Electrical

Short course training will include:

- White Card certification
- Test and Tag
- Elevated Work Platforms
- First Aid

To transfer your apprentice to PEER, contact us now on 8348 1200

